

Communication, Presentation, and Leadership Development

Great business starts with effective communication

Mission

Our mission is to co-create a world of great communicators.

For the last 9 years, Connection Lab has delivered workshops and executive development programs around the world. From mining and technology to finance and tourism, companies with thousands of employees - to small start ups and charitable organizations, Connection Lab is both introducing and sustaining effective communication practices on a global scale

Effective communication is your competitive advantage.

Speaker and audience are in this together - from internal meetings to customer relations, understanding what we control and what we don't as communicators is the beginning of the journey. Curiosity, invitation and making an offer to an audience that feels seen and heard is how you can fulfill the potential of your organization.

"We've used Connection Lab for leadership development across the company, and received feedback that it's the best training people have ever taken."

- Cathy Hawley Co-Founder, Bolster

Methodology

Connection Lab is a communication methodology rooted in the principles of the performing arts combined with ontological coaching. It is practiced in more than 10 countries by thousands of graduates worldwide and growing every day.

The Connection Lab methodology is condensed in the Six Box Model: three primary questions that we use as lenses to observe the three primary relationships. The 6-Box Model is an effective deconstruction of the nature of communication and an awareness of how each of us shows up uniquely under the stress of our realities and how it may impact our communication.

This framework is embedded in all of the Connection Lab modules. As we explore the principles and practices of effective communication, the 6-Box model offers an opportunity to see how we show up under stress, decide if that's how we want to and practice new competencies that will close the gap. Along with improved communication, participants create a shared language and culture around their communication, presentation and leadership development.

Connection Lab SIX BOX MODEL for Improved Communication

“The way the Connection Lab workshop is structured this experience is very simple, yet very powerful. People didn’t expect something so simple to be so powerful and that it was very easy to see at the end of the session.”

Javier Careaga – Director de Operaciones Estudiantiles, Universidad del Valle de México

Connection Lab Studios

Connection Lab Studio Programs are flexible and customizable, and fully rooted in the principles of the performing arts. They help participants reframe their understanding of communication and leadership. They model the very practices participants will use for the rest of their career. Participants model their new practices, leading others and often become internal coaches for those they work with. This is how your business gains the competitive advantage of effective communication.

They are multi-week programs that lead participants through a rigorous set of experiences and methodologies that carve a path to great leadership.

The Six Modules

While the Connection Lab Program is flexible and customizable, there is a core curriculum. Ideally, the program should be experienced sequentially as each principle builds on the last. All of these modules are experiential in nature, participants are involved, using text from great works of art and literature – and self generated text to fully understand what each means to them.

1 - Relationship/Discovering the Audience

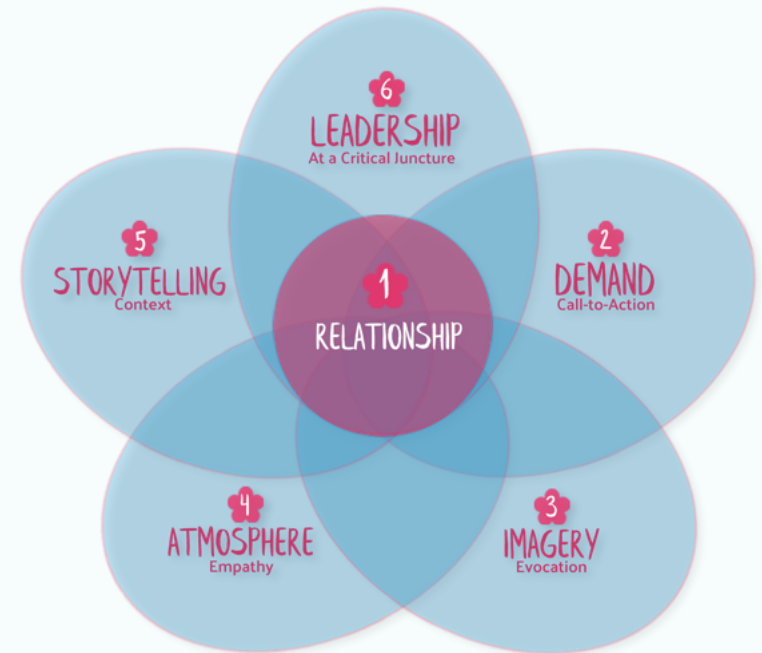

This session reveals that our relationship to our audience includes different competencies than our relationship to our content and our relationship to ourselves. We practice putting connection with the audience ahead of our content.

2 - Demand/The Call To Action

Now that our audience feels seen, heard and invited to inform our content, in this session we call them to action. On an audience that feels seen and heard, making a demand on them is a way to build trust.

3 - Imagery/Imagination

In this session we discover how to tap the imagination of the audience. Here we invite them to co-create our offer with us. This session focuses on the source of collaboration.

4 - Atmosphere

If it's true that our audience informs our content, in this session we discover how the atmosphere informs our content as well. How does our environment affect our relationships and our calls to action?

5 - Storytelling

Now we start assembling the pieces – and applying them to the craft of story telling. We explore the nature of stories, their enduring nature, their power, structure and ways to use them in professional settings.

6 - Leadership

Using the text of great leaders in fiction and non-fiction, here we explore the difference between authority and leadership. We also begin to effectively answer the questions, “How do I show up under stress?” and “Which of my skills, abilities and empathies disappear first under stress”.

“My Connection Lab experience was profound. It was one of the best learning experience because it was experiential learning. It was learning in action.”

Real-time Feedback

Connection Lab learning is experiential – and participants are required to practice and play with exercises to discover their value per individual – with real time feed back from a live audience.

Rooted in Practice

Connection Lab is a unique, blended methodology born of the study and practice of effective communication and the principles of the performing arts.

Maximum Impact

It is also layered work, where the active exploration of principles are stacked on top of each other to create a foundation upon which different content can become interchangeable and modified for maximum impact.

“What struck me about the catchphrases was that as you thought about each one and you peeled back the onion, there was always more to it and more to it. Early on I got the sense that someone had had a lot of experience helping people come to realizations, both slowly and then all at once.”

–Eric Edelman, VP of Platform at Common, GM of Noah

“This was one of the best training I’ve ever experienced. Highly engaging, very valuable. I am already applying the things that I learned. Very much recommended!”
